

Laws of Stewardship

Stewardship consists of all things with which we are given or blessed

If we do not work to grow, cultivate, or take care of our stewardship we risk losing it

To some is given more stewardship than others

Stewardship is grown at the benefit or service of others

Some stewardship like assignments, roles, titles, and other responsibilities are temporary

To good stewards is given more stewardship

Our greatest stewardship is the relationships we have with others including the relationship we have with deity.

Some stewardship appears to be a burden and other stewardship is more clearly a blessing to the steward

Stewardship needs to be prioritized

Stewards are accountable to he who gave the stewardship

A wise steward shall inherit all things
